DETAILED ACTION

1. This application has been examined. This application is a continuation of S.N. 09/028069, filed 2/23/1998 and now U.S. Patent 6219034.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 21, 27, 29, 31-34, 40 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Rosenberg et al (5880714) and Keyson (6046726).

4. Regarding claim 21, see in Rosenberg et al the computer system with processor and operating system and display (Figure 1, 2A, column 3 lines 10-20 ), the pointing device with position sensor having an output line and tactile actuator having an input line (column 3 lines 22-32, column 4 lines 25-46), wherein the input line is responsive to the pointing device driver which is in turn responsive to the output line (column 4 lines 40-55, column 6 lines 40-50), an application responsive to the pointing device driver and operating system and communicating with the display, and wherein the driver is responsive to a general purpose application (column 5 lines 1-22 and 33-42, abstract). Rosenberg et al do not go into the details of plural applications, with a plurality of application specific profile elements for the applications that define tactile signals to the actuator when interacting with the corresponding applications, but do show the application responsive to the driver and defining tactile signals to an actuator application for efficient user feedback (aforecited, also column 8 lines 1-11). Furthermore, Keyson shows the plurality of applications, and with the specific profile elements for applications that define tactile signals to the actuator when interacting with the corresponding applications (column 2 lines 1-17, column 3 lines 1-18, column 4 lines 1-5) for efficient user feedback. It would have been obvious to a person with ordinary skill in the art to have this in Rosenberg et al because it would provide efficient user feedback.

5. Regarding claim 27, the application specific profile elements in Keyson correspond to one of the applications (column 4 lines 1-5).

6. Regarding claim 29, the system has an operating system interface elements to define signals to the actuator when interacting with the operating system (Rosenberg et al column 5 lines 1-22).

Art Unit: 2174

7. Regarding claims 31-32, Rosenberg et al show using a convenient input device for a user to hold. Keyson shows the pointing device may be a mouse with housing, the transducer is in the housing, and the position sensor is in the mouse, and the actuator is the mouse pad (column 3 lines 24-33). It would have been obvious to a person to use this arrangement in Rosenberg et al, because it would be a convenient pointing device for a user to hold.

8. Regarding claim 33, Keyson mentions in column 3 lines 24-33 possibilities which inherently include a touch pad, and the obviousness to have this follows as in paragraph 7 of this Office Action.

9. Claims 34 and 40 show the same features as claim 21 and are rejected for the same reasons. Note that multiple actuation commands and applications with specific profile elements in claim 21 would correspond with the first and second commands and applications in claim 34.

10. The nonstatutory double patenting rejection is based on a judicially created doctrine grounded in public policy (a policy reflected in the statute) so as to prevent the unjustified or improper timewise extension of the "right to exclude" granted by a patent and to prevent possible harassment by multiple assignees. See In re Goodman, 11 F.3d 1046, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993); In re Longi, 759 F.2d 887, 225 USPQ 645 (Fed. Cir. 1985); In re Van Ornum, 686

F.2d 937, 214 USPQ 761 (CCPA 1982); In re Vogel, 422 F.2d 438, 164 USPQ 619 (CCPA 1970); and, In re Thorington, 418 F.2d 528, 163 USPQ 644 (CCPA 1969).

A timely filed terminal disclaimer in compliance with 37 CFR 1.321(c) may be used to overcome an actual or provisional rejection based on a nonstatutory double patenting ground provided the conflicting application or patent is shown to be commonly owned with this application. See 37 CFR 1.130(b).

Effective January 1, 1994, a registered attorney or agent of record may sign a terminal disclaimer: A terminal disclaimer signed by the assignee must fully comply with 37 CFR 3.73(b).

11. Claims 21-40 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 1-27 of U.S. Patent No. 6219034. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because both show the computer processor, operating system, position sensor with output line, tactile actuator with input line, pointing device driver responsive to output line of the position sensor and input line of actuator responsive to pointing device driver, plurality of applications responsive to the pointing device driver to the operating system and in communication with the display, the pointing device driver responsive to the general applications, and plurality of application specific profile elements for applications that define tactile signals to be sent to the actuator when interacting with the application. The claims are generally broader than those of the '034 patent.
